Child sexual exploitation

The NSPCC is putting a spotlight on what works to support children and young people who have experienced or are at risk of child sexual exploitation (CSE). Findings from an evaluation of the Protect and Respect programme, which supports children and young people aged 11-19 who are affected by CSE, include: practitioners should work with a young person to understand what factors in their life may lead to an increased risk of CSE and identify what long-term support is needed. This may include working with families and advocating for engagement with other services.

Parents in emotional distress

Public Health England has published updated data on the proportion of children living with at least one parent reporting symptoms of emotional distress in England. Findings include: around one in three children lived with at least one parent reporting symptoms of emotional distress in 2016 to 2017 and there was an increase in the proportion of children living with parents in emotional distress compared to data reported between 2015 and 2016.

Sexual abuse of boys

Community care has published an article by a practice improvement advisor at the Centre of expertise on child sexual abuse about what social workers can do improve identification and encourage disclosure of sexual abuse amongst boys. Recommendations include: when working with males who display challenging behaviour, always look to understand the cause of the behaviour and not just address the behaviour itself; design a process to gain feedback from young males and include them in innovations and service design; and use supervision to practise receiving disclosures and asking gender-sensitive questions about child sexual abuse.

Evaluating interventions

The Early Intervention Foundation (EIF) has published a ten step guide for evaluating interventions and services for children and their families. Steps cover: planning and developing a new intervention; piloting and testing the intervention; refining and monitoring the intervention; and adapting and expanding the reach of the intervention.

Child neglect assessment

Research in Practice (RiP) has published a blog about the NSPCC's Graded Care Profile 2 (GCP2) tool, which supports professionals to assess the quality of care given to a child and to identify where parental neglect is putting a child at risk of harm. The blog looks at the impact of GCP2 and ongoing work to encourage wider and more frequent use of the tool.

Family Approach Protocol

11 MARCH 2019

Click here to access the Family Approach Protocol

This Protocol has been commissioned by the 4 Safeguarding Children Boards (4LSCBs) and 4 Safeguarding Adult Boards (4LSABs) in Hampshire, Isle of Wight, Portsmouth and Southampton. The protocol was commissioned in response to findings from a range of reviews across all Board's which highlight the need for professionals to work effectively together to achieve better outcomes for adults, children and their families across all areas.

This protocol, and its supporting documents in the online toolkit replace what was previously produced in the Joint Working Protocol (JWP). The information from the JWP has been distilled and presented in a more digestible format, and has been co-produced by agencies in both the children's and adult's workforce. The summary and flowchart from the JWP is still available for professionals here.

The aspects of practice described in this protocol are a shared responsibility, and must be at the heart of practice across all partner agencies of the 4LSAB and 4LSCBs.
